

Tuesday, July 26, 2005

I have been waiting for this meet for it seems like two years. My final meet as a Wilton Wahoo was coming closer and closer. Coming into this I knew it would be an emotional one. With all the distractions that the summer going into college brings, I felt like I did my best to keep on track with work and of course swimming. When the day finally came to leave for Nationals, I felt ready to race but not ready to say goodbye to the team.

The bus ride down to Nationals wasn't the best bus I've been on. It wasn't the driver's fault or our coach's fault, but the actual bus's fault. There was no air conditioning and even though it was as big as a coach bus, the style of it and the comfort leaned more towards that of a school bus.

Anyway here I am now at the first day of Nationals getting ready for my first event, which is the 400m freestyle. I am kind of nervous but ready to get in there and see what I can do. I am hoping that everyone on our team swims well so that we will have many people to cheer for tonight. Anyway, here I go, good luck to everyone!

Graham Greytak
Wilton Y Wahoos
Connecticut