

Day 2, Wednesday July 27, 2005

Most of the Schroeder swimmers swam as well or even better than yesterday, with several individuals from our team making it back tonight, plus our boys four hundred free relay is seated first! We have realized that even if you do not make the goal in which you have set for yourself, one should still be happy that they have made it this far; plus your teammates will be there for you and appreciate you no matter how you swim a particular race. Tonight will be amazing just like last night. Though hopefully the storm, which is approaching, will not interfere with tonight's races. Everyday the excitement level increases for Margot and I, because we cannot wait to watch some of the fastest swimmers in the country. Our first teammate is about to swim, which requires us to cheer loudly.
